Return information of plaintiff could prematurely disclose to plaintiff the scope, direction, and strategy of the IRS in conducting plaintiff's examination, thereby impairing Federal tax administration. Pre-decisional document used for internal discussions, which does not contain the agency's final determination with respect to the Microsoft examination. Reflects the thoughts and impressions of attorneys formulating legal advice for their client agency. Disclosure would harm IRS law enforcement efforts by prematurely revealing information indicating the strategy, scope, and direction of the ongoing investigation into plaintiff's potential tax liability.

2014-12 (WH Batch 008)	Full	MSFOIA_WH036579	MSFOIA_WH036598	0.7.72.265281.1			Workpaper	CASE HISTORY	3/5/2009	William McCarthy	Not indicated on document	Description of agency attorney's activities working on exam, including descriptions of decisions being discussed and legal advice requested or provided to assist examiners.	(b)(3)/IRC § 6103(a); (b)(3)/IRC § 6103(e)(7); (b)(5)/Deliberative Process Privilege, Attorney-Client Privilege, and Attorney Work Product; (b)(7)(A)	The withheld information is deliberative in that it contains opinions and/or recommendations reflecting the "give-and-take" of the agency's deliberative processes which may or may not have led to final agency determinations. The disclosure of this information would expose the decision-making processes of the agency (including the Office of Chief Counsel), in such a way as to discourage candid discussion within the agency and undermine its ability to perform its tax administration functions. It is therefore withheld pursuant to the deliberative process privilege under FOIA exemption 5. The information being withheld consists of information subject to the attorney client privilege which protects confidential communications between an attorney and client relating to a legal matter for which the client has sought professional advice. The privilege also applies to agency counsel who provides guidance to the agency. The privilege extends not only to facts divulged by a client to his attorney in confidence, but also to opinions rendered by an attorney to his client based upon those facts. The attorney-client privilege protects confidential inter-attorney communications as well as confidential attorney-client communications. The information being withheld consists of information subject to the work product doctrine which protects documents and other memoranda prepared by an attorney in contemplation of litigation. The doctrine extends not only to documents prepared by an attorney, but also to those working under the direction of an attorney. The information being withheld consists of advice prepared by Chief Counsel attorneys in response to a request for legal advice associated with the hazards of litigating specific transactions from plaintiff's audit. This information is also being withheld pursuant to FOIA exemption 7A, and FOIA exemption 3 in conjunction with 26 U.S.C. § 6103(e)(7). Further, certain information is withheld pursuant to FOIA exemption 3 and the confidentiality provisions of 26 U.S.C. § 6103(a), as it consists of Federal tax return information of third party taxpayer(s) to which plaintiff is not entitled.

2014-12 (WH Batch 009)	Full	MSFOIA_WH039828	MSFOIA_WH039846	0.7.72.175031.1			Spreadsheet	Significant § 482 Buy-in Cases	6/1/2008	Michelle Korbas	Not indicated on document	Agency attorneys' draft list of buy-in cases with attorneys' notes about the cases, circulated for discussion purposes and for consideration of issues to be examined with respect to Microsoft examination and other taxpayers' examinations; identifying third-party taxpayer examinations	(b)(3)/IRC § 6103(a); (b)(3)/IRC § 6103(e)(7); (b)(5)/Deliberative Process Privilege, Attorney-Client Privilege, and Attorney Work Product; (b)(7)(A)	The withheld information is deliberative in that it contains opinions and/or recommendations reflecting the "give-and-take" of the agency's deliberative processes which may or may not have led to final agency determinations. The disclosure of this information would expose the decision-making processes of the agency (including the Office of Chief Counsel), in such a way as to discourage candid discussion within the agency and undermine its ability to perform its tax administration functions. It is therefore withheld pursuant to the deliberative process privilege under FOIA exemption 5. The information being withheld consists of information subject to the attorney client privilege which protects confidential communications between an attorney and client relating to a legal matter for which the client has sought professional advice. The privilege also applies to agency counsel who provides guidance to the agency. The privilege extends not only to facts divulged by a client to his attorney in confidence, but also to opinions rendered by an attorney to his client based upon those facts. The attorney-client privilege protects confidential inter-attorney communications as well as confidential attorney-client communications. The information being withheld consists of information subject to the work product doctrine which protects documents and other memoranda prepared by an attorney in contemplation of litigation. The doctrine extends not only to documents prepared by an attorney, but also to those working under the direction of an attorney. The information being withheld consists of advice prepared by Chief Counsel attorneys in response to a request for legal advice associated with the hazards of litigating specific transactions from plaintiff's audit. This information is also being withheld pursuant to FOIA exemption 7A, and FOIA exemption 3 in conjunction with 26 U.S.C. § 6103(e)(7). Further, certain information is withheld pursuant to FOIA exemption 3 and the confidentiality provisions of 26 U.S.C. § 6103(a), as it consists of Federal tax return information of third party taxpayer(s) to which plaintiff is not entitled.

(b)(3)/IRC § 6103(a); (b)(3)/IRC § 6103(e)(7); (b)(5)/Deliberative Process Privilege, Attorney-Client Privilege, and Attorney Work Product; (b)(7)(A)	The withheld information is deliberative in that it contains opinions and/or recommendations reflecting the "give-and-take" of the agency's deliberative processes which may or may not have led to final agency determinations. The disclosure of this information would expose the decision-making processes of the agency (including the Office of Chief Counsel), in such a way as to discourage candid discussion within the agency and undermine its ability to perform its tax administration functions. It is therefore withheld pursuant to the deliberative process privilege under FOIA exemption 5. The information being withheld consists of information subject to the attorney client privilege which protects confidential communications between an attorney and client relating to a legal matter for which the client has sought professional advice. The privilege also applies to agency counsel who provides guidance to the agency. The privilege extends not only to facts divulged by a client to his attorney in confidence, but also to opinions rendered by an attorney to his client based upon those facts. The attorney-client privilege protects confidential inter-attorney communications as well as confidential attorney-client communications. The information being withheld consists of information subject to the work product doctrine which protects documents and other memoranda prepared by an attorney in contemplation of litigation. The doctrine extends not only to documents prepared by an attorney, but also to those working under the direction of an attorney. The information being withheld consists of advice prepared by Chief Counsel attorneys in response to a request for legal advice associated with the hazards of litigating specific transactions from plaintiff's audit. This information is also being withheld pursuant to FOIA exemption 7A, and FOIA exemption 3 in conjunction with 26 U.S.C. § 6103(e)(7). Further, certain information is withheld pursuant to FOIA exemption 3 and the confidentiality provisions of 26 U.S.C. § 6103(a), as it consists of Federal tax return information of third party taxpayer(s) to which plaintiff is not entitled.

2014-12 (WH Batch 009)	Full	MSFOIA_WH040718	MSFOIA_WH040731	0.7.72.265296.1			Memorandum	With WAM June '08 Activity	7/8/2008	William McCarthy	Not indicated on document	Internal Case History summary prepared by Counsel, describing confidential thoughts and communications of agency attorney regarding the examination and advice requested by examiners.	(b)(3)/IRC § 6103(a); (b)(3)/IRC § 6103(e)(7); (b)(5)/Deliberative Process Privilege, Attorney-Client Privilege, and Attorney Work Product; (b)(7)(A)	The withheld information is deliberative in that it contains opinions and/or recommendations reflecting the "give-and-take" of the agency's deliberative processes which may or may not have led to final agency determinations. The disclosure of this information would expose the decision-making processes of the agency (including the Office of Chief Counsel), in such a way as to discourage candid discussion within the agency and undermine its ability to perform its tax administration functions. It is therefore withheld pursuant to the deliberative process privilege under FOIA exemption 5. The information being withheld consists of information subject to the attorney client privilege which protects confidential communications between an attorney and client relating to a legal matter for which the client has sought professional advice. The privilege also applies to agency counsel who provides guidance to the agency. The privilege extends not only to facts divulged by a client to his attorney in confidence, but also to opinions rendered by an attorney to his client based upon those facts. The attorney-client privilege protects confidential inter-attorney communications as well as confidential attorney-client communications. The information being withheld consists of information subject to the work product doctrine which protects documents and other memoranda prepared by an attorney in contemplation of litigation. The doctrine extends not only to documents prepared by an attorney, but also to those working under the direction of an attorney. The information being withheld consists of advice prepared by Chief Counsel attorneys in response to a request for legal advice associated with the hazards of litigating specific transactions from plaintiff's audit. This information is also being withheld pursuant to FOIA exemption 7A, and FOIA exemption 3 in conjunction with 26 U.S.C. § 6103(e)(7). Further, certain information is withheld pursuant to FOIA exemption 3 and the confidentiality provisions of 26 U.S.C. § 6103(a), as it consists of Federal tax return information of third party taxpayer(s) to which plaintiff is not entitled.

Return information of plaintiff could prematurely disclose to plaintiff the scope, direction, strategy, and resource constraints of the IRS in conducting examinations, thereby impairing Federal tax administration. Pre-decisional document used for internal discussions, which does not contain the agency's final determination with respect to the Microsoft examination or other taxpayers' examinations, or the subject matter of this record. Disclosure would harm IRS law enforcement efforts by prematurely revealing information indicating the strategy, scope, direction, and resource limitations of the ongoing investigation into various taxpayers' potential tax liability.
